

Viktorija Bilić

PhD in Translation Studies (2013, University of Heidelberg, Germany)

Diplom (M.A.), Translation Studies, (2008, University of Heidelberg, Germany)

Short Bio

Viktorija Bilić is Associate Professor and Chair of Translation and Interpreting Studies at the University of Wisconsin-Milwaukee. She holds an M.A. and a Ph.D. in Translation Studies from the University of Heidelberg (working languages: German, English, Spanish, Croatian). She regularly teaches German to English and English to German Translation workshops, Literary Translation, and Computer-Assisted Translation Tools. Her research interests include historical translation and translation pedagogy. In the past five years, she has published two books and four articles and has presented at more than two dozen national and international Translation Studies and German Studies conferences.

Candidate Statement

I have been involved with ATISA since the 2018 conference was held in Milwaukee. In striving for more visibility for our field, I look forward to connecting with US-based researchers, in order to strengthen our research ties, and to expand the ATISA network of scholars. Serving as a member-at-large would allow me to further promote translation and interpreting studies as a discipline in the U.S. and abroad.